Much Ado About Nothing - Synopsis

Don Pedro, Claudio, and Benedick arrive at Leonato's house in Messina. Beatrice and Benedick, who have known each other for a long time, instantly resume their witty war of words. Meanwhile, Claudio confesses to Don Pedro about his love for Leonato's daughter, Hero, prompting Don Pedro to promise he will disguise himself at that night's party to woo Hero on Claudio's behalf.

Margaret informs Leonato that she overheard Claudio declaring his love for Hero and planning to acknowledge it during the dance. Leonato decides to let his daughter know the news in advance so she can prepare her answer.

The melancholy Don John is frustrated and shouts at Margaret. He wants to be a villain to make life harder for his brother, Don Pedro. Borachio then enters and informs him of the intended marriage between Claudio and Hero, providing Don John with a perfect opportunity to cause trouble. Don John is very happy with this plan; he takes some drugs and kisses Borachio!

Much Ado About Nothing - Synopsis

There is a large party where everyone wears huge animal masks on their heads. Beatrice wittily mocks Benedick to his face pretending not to realise it is him. Don John maliciously convinces Claudio that Don Pedro is wooing Hero for himself. The misunderstanding is cleared up when Don Pedro reveals he has successfully won Hero for Claudio. Don Pedro, Leonato, Claudio, Hero, and Margaret all agree together to trick Beatrice and Benedick into falling in love with each other.

Don John remains eager to ruin Claudio's upcoming wedding, so Borachio proposes a covert plan to deceive Don Pedro and Claudio. Borachio intends to meet Margaret at Hero's bedroom window on the night before the wedding, creating the illusion that Hero is disloyal.

While hiding in the orchard, Benedick overhears Don Pedro, Claudio, and Leonato staging a conversation about how Beatrice is desperately in love with him. Believing that Leonato speaks the truth, Benedick resolves to cast off his pride and be horribly in love with Beatrice.

Much Ado About Nothing - Synopsis

Hero and Margaret deliberately let Beatrice overhear them praising Benedick and lamenting that Beatrice is too proud and disdainful to accept his love. Stricken by what she hears, Beatrice vows to commit herself to Benedick.

Don Pedro and Claudio tease a newly transformed and lovesick Benedick, who asks to speak with Leonato in private. Don John then approaches the Prince and Claudio, falsely claiming that Hero is disloyal and inviting them to witness her chamber window being entered at midnight. They see Margaret and Borachio in the room being romantic together, and think it is Hero instead of Margaret.

INTERVAL

ACT 2

Dogberry and Verges give the watchmen comically confusing instructions to keep the peace during the busy night. Soon after, Seacoal and The Watch overhear Borachio boasting about how he successfully fooled Claudio and the Prince into thinking Margaret was Hero, and they promptly arrest him.

On the morning of her wedding, Hero gets dressed with the help of Margaret. Beatrice arrives claiming she is sick and out of tune, prompting Margaret to wittily tease her about being in love with Benedick.

Dogberry and Verges try to inform Leonato about catching Borachio the night before, but the way they tell him what happened is very confusing and Leonato is too busy to understand.

At the altar, Claudio publicly denounces Hero as disloyal, causing her to be heartbroken as Don Pedro and Don John back his accusations before they all storm out. Led by Sister Frances's advice, the family decides to pretend Hero has died of grief to turn slander into remorse. Benedick and Beatrice confess their mutual love, and Beatrice demands that Benedick kill Claudio in revenge.

Much Ado About Nothing - Synopsis

Dogberry conducts a comically disorganised interrogation of Borachio, where he reveals the plot to wrongfully accuse Hero. Upon learning that Hero has died and Don John has fled, Dogberry orders the prisoner to be bound and taken to Leonato.

A grieving Leonato rejects comfort and fiercely challenges Claudio to a duel for slandering his daughter to death. After Benedick also arrives to challenge Claudio, Dogberry brings in Borachio, who fully confesses the deception to a devastated Claudio and Don Pedro. Margaret is devastated to learn she was part of the deception and screams in sadness.

Benedick playfully trades wits with Margaret and Beatrice while waiting to hear if Claudio will accept his challenge. Margaret then arrives to break the news that Hero has been proven innocent and that Don John was responsible for everything.

Mother Courage and Her Children - Synopsis

Claudio fulfills his penance by visiting Hero's family tomb at night to read a mournful epitaph and sing a solemn hymn. The tomb opens up on the stage and fire comes up. As dawn breaks, he and Don Pedro leave to change their clothes and head to Leonato's house.

At the assembly, Claudio vows to marry Leonato's masked "niece" who unveils herself to reveal she is actually the living and innocent Hero. Benedick and Beatrice discover they were tricked into loving each other, but they happily agree to marry anyway just as news arrives that Don John has been captured.
